REVELS TOURING ENSEMBLE

invites you to attend the Boston premiere of the musical theater production:

There's a Meeting Here Tonight!

Two performances

Saturday, April 1, at 4 pm and 7:30 pm

The Hutchinson Family Singers, America's first social activist performers, entertained thousands throughout New England from the 1840's until after the Civil War. Committed to the causes of emancipation and women's suffrage, they often appeared at rallies with great leaders of the time such as Frederick Douglass and Susan B. Anthony.

Join us for a family reunion when the Hutchinsons and their friends gather to celebrate their accomplishments. The staged performance includes a costumed cast of 40 adults and children and audience participation.

FEATURING:

Kathryn Denney, Carl Corey, Jack McCreless and Don Duncan as the original quartet

Walter Locke as P. T. Barnum

Milton Wright as Frederick Douglass

Len Solomon as "The Phenomenon," (juggler and one-man band)

The beautifully restored Roxbury Center for Arts is easily approached by car with free parking available behind the hall, in a lot on Harrison Avenue and on the street, and is within walking distance of the MBTA's Dudley Station.

TICKETS: $15; $8, seniors and children.

Available from cast members and at www.RCAHH.org/2006season.

Appropriate for adults and children ages 6 and up.
